Back Pay Under the Eight-Hour Law. To the Editor of THE EVENING STAR:

About five months ago several Congressmen found themselves minus a portion of their salaries through the conduct of an unfaithful public servant. The government owed them and had not paid them. They preferred a claim against the government for their money. Congress promptly passed a bill for their relief and the President approved it-all in the space of three little months. This is all right and just as it should be. On the 25th day of June. 1868. Congress passed an act making eight hours a day's work for all laborers, workmen and mechanics then employed, or thereafter to be employed, by or on behalf of the government of the United States. On the 21st of March, 1878, the Hon. Secretary of the Navy ssued an order directing the commandants of he different navy yards and naval stations throughout the United States to hire laborers, workmen and mechanics on the basis of eight hours a day, and if they worked ten hours a day they should be paid a corresponding increase of wages. That order was in the follow-

"The department will contract for the labor of mechanics, foremen, leading men and laborers on the basis of eight hours per day. All workmen electing to labor ten hours a day will receive a proportionate increase of their wages." Under this order the men worked ten hours each calendar day, six months of the year, for the five succeeding years, but were never paid one dollar for their extra work of two hours per day. This money was as hon-estly due them as the salaries of the Congressmen were due them. One party had earned their money in the faithful discharge of public duties—the other in building ships and war material for our navy. Who will make the distinction in the merit of the claims? And yet the former have been promptly paid while the latter have been begging for their pay for the last ten years without avail. In the Forty-eighth Congress bills were introduced in both eighth Congress bills were introduced in both houses at the request of these men praying that they might be allowed to bring suit in the Court of Claims against the government where their right to this money could be properly determined. Since that time seven favorable reports have been made by the respective houses of Congress in which the committees have said that the request was reasonable and ought to be granted. Has it been granted? No! The money has not only been denied them, but they have not been granted that which should be the common right of every citizen of the United States; that is, to have the merits of their claims tested by the judgment of a competent tribunal. This is one of the differences between Congressmen and workingmen. It goes without saying that a high public official having a claim against the government has little or no difficulty in getting it paid, but as we descend in the scale it becomes correspondingly harder, and when we get down to the workingman it is next to an impossibility. The Party Wall in the District.

Every writer on real property has something to say about it but as it is governed in some places by local usage, in others by prescription and in others still by legislative enactment, it is impossible to predicate with certainty what the law is in a particular state without consulting its statutes and the decisions of its supreme court. In the District of Columbia the law is narrowed down to the building regulations of 1791, and the interpretation given by the district attorney, which has provoked so much comment and discussion, is in accord with the decision of the United States circuit court on the very point at issue. In Miller agt. Elliott, C.C., U.S., March term, 1839, the court says: "In the city of Washington, by the funda- Madrid have signed a protocol subject to the mental regulations in building, established in 1791, it is a condition annexed to title that when the owner of a lot builds a partition wall between himself and his neighbor he shall lay the foundation equally upon the land of both, and any person thereafter using the partition cars, receiving injuries from which he died a wall or any part of it shall reimburse the first builder a moiety of the cost of such part as he shall use."

This ianburg. rule, though in some instances imposing a hardship, is in the vast majority of cases a great and mutual benefit, and can only be con-demned by that class of narrow thinkers who never see beyond their own affairs and whose minds are incapable of grasping those broad and universal principles of equity which under-lie general rules of law. CRANDAL MACKEY.

Somebody Changed a Word. The ladies of the Daisy Chain Guild are indignant over a piece of vandalism which occurred in connection with their entertainment given last week in one of the new store rooms on Connecticut avenue, near K street. They had put a neat painted sign in front of the door, having the usual purpose of a sign, and left it out over night so that those who ran or walked might read, and in the morning when they came back they discovered that somebody had come between the days and with a brush had painted out the word guild and painted in the word gang, and a great sign stood staring the whole world in the face bearing the legend 'Daisy Chain Gang."

THE BODY IN A BARREL. The Danish Consul Has a White Elephant on His Hands.

The body of the murdered man which was shipped from Denmark in a barrel and was appraised by the New York custom house people as "chemicals" is now on the top floor of the appraiser's office, at No. 402 Washington street, as the address was a fictitious one. The barrel would have been sold at auction with other unclaimed goods next Friday had not the murderer's confession in Copenhagen led to the discovery of its ghastly contents. The duties on the cask and contents under the classification "chemical compound" amount to $2.25, but they will be remitted.

"Now that Uncle Sam has turned the body over to you what will you do with it?" was asked of H. M. Braem, the Danish consul, yesterday afternoon.

"But I haven't got it. The government has it and I don't want such a horrible present."

Then the reporter showed Consul Braem a copy of a telegram to the collector of customs authorizing him to deliver the cask containing the body to H. M. Braem, Danish consul. The consul said he had sent telegrams to the home government and the Danish minister at Washington and was awaiting instructions. He had not notified the police or the coroner, but he thought the best thing to do with the body was to bury it. Coroner Levy told the reporter that he had taken no steps to obtain possession of the hody. Officially he was presented that he had taken no steps to obtain possession of the hody.
